Letters To The Editor

Send your letters to: Chaunce100@aol.com

ASSHOLE LOVE/HATE

Dear Editor:
You had a bunch to pick from: Paulson, Greenspan, Corzine and all of the other what I call the "Economic Buddy f--kers" that have ruined our economy. First they were advocates of deindustrialization, then had policies to make sure people move far away from farms, destroyed much of our railroads and now: Bad economic advice, millions of foreclosed homes.

All that ignoramus Cramer does is scream like the beotch or, your words, asshole that he is.
Neil Lori
Bayonne NJ. Good magazine last week.

Dear Editor:
God, I hate Jim Cramer. I was so happy to see him picked as Asshole of the Week last week. I hate everything about him. Not only does he seem to have zero clue about what he's talking about, but he also is one ugly mother f--ker. Good job.

Love,
Lori
New Milford

Dear Editor:
You guys have some nerve calling Jim Cramer an asshole. If you ask me, I think Chaunce is the asshole. I doubt you'll print this. But f--k Chaunce Hayden!

Ass
Mark
Manhattan

Dear Editor:
Jim Cramer should sue you guys. He's made me tons of cash. Long live, Cramer! Booyah!

Drop dead,
Tommy Cramer

STALKER OF THE WEEK

Dear Editor:
Props to your Model of the Week last week. I thought Sandi was smokin hot! How can a normal guy with a decent job and semi-good looks get to meet her? All I'm asking for is a shot. Help a bro out!

Incredibly horny,
Bob

FROM THE EDITOR:

Dear Bob,
I'm probably going to regret this. But you can see Sandi behind the bar at Lenora's in Hackensack, N.J. OK, let the stalking begin ... Sorry, Sandi.

By Dan Lorenzo

As any of my regular readers know, my wife and I decided many years ago not to bring more children into this world. Last week, I saw one of the many scenarios that confirmed my beliefs. I know this is really gross and white trash, but I convinced my wife to go to a diner with me. I know what kind of people frequent diners, but even I was shocked by what I saw. Two obese high school girls came in with one of their moms. The heavy girls were eating chocolate chip cookies as they came in. Then, they all ordered chocolate milk shakes before the waitress could even say hello. What freaked me out wasn't even the fact that everything they eventually ordered had the word "fried" in it. The house mom was on her cell phone (of course) and the one girl was talking to the other seated across from her. The one fatty was pretending to be listening as her friend was pouring her fat heart out to her, but underneath the table she was texting somebody else! What a beautiful sight! Three obese people sitting at a table eating fried onion rings, none of them talking/listening to each other. How I yearn for a teenage son or daughter who sends texts to their friends while I'm trying to talk to them! I really feel like I'm missing out on a beautiful experience!

Speaking of diners ... Alan Tecchio sent me this e-mail he received recently. Read it before you vote!

"Today on my way to lunch I passed a homeless guy with a sign that read 'Vote Obama, I need the money.' I laughed. Once in the restaurant my server had on a 'Obama '08' tie. Again, I laughed as he had given away his political preference—just imagine the coincidence. When the bill came I decided not to tip the server and explained to him that I was exploring the Obama redistribution of wealth concept. He stood there in disbelief while I told him that I was going to redistribute his tip to someone who I deemed more in need—the homeless guy outside. The server angrily stormed from my sight. I went outside, gave the homeless guy $10 and told him to thank the server inside as I've decided he could use the money more. The homeless guy was grateful. At the end of my rather unscientific redistribution experiment I realized the homeless guy was grateful for the money he did not earn, but the waiter was pretty angry that I gave away the money he did earn even though the actual recipient deserved money more. I guess redistribution of wealth is an easier thing to swallow in concept than in practical application."

ASSHOLE OF THE WEEK

There're plenty of sleazy multimillionaires roaming this earth. But the sleaziest of them all may well be former New York Knicks' coach Isiah Thomas. The 47-year-old creep recently tried to off himself by taking a bunch of prescription sleeping pills. Not that I'm a big fan of suicide, but sometimes ... How can I say this without sounding completely heartless? Sometimes, removing one's self from this world may be the only redeemable aspect of one's miserable life. In Thomas' case, I'm afraid the latter applies quite nicely.

Hey, there's no real crime in running the once great New York Knicks franchise into the ground. If the team's midget owner, Jim Dolan, is willing to pay millions of dollars to have a dumbass destroy the entire organization, so be it. In fact, there was even some entertainment value to watching the entire franchise crumble to pieces while the fans serenaded Thomas nightly with chants of "Fire Isiah!"

And who can forget the time Thomas was sued for sexual harassment by Anucha Browne Sanders? The matter came to trial in September 2007 and the former NBA All-Star was determined to have made demeaning statements to Sanders, as well as making sexual advances and repeatedly telling her that he was in love with her. Madison Square Garden was ordered to pay Browne Sanders $11.6 million, one of the largest sexual harassment judgments in history.

"I'm innocent, I'm very innocent, and I did not do the things she has accused me in this courtroom of doing," Thomas said after the decision. Even OJ must have got a laugh at that.

But what really makes Thomas this week's Asshole is how this despicable excuse for a human being attempted to blame his daughter as the family member who tried to commit suicide in a pathetic effort to "cover-up" the embarrassing mess. "It wasn't his daughter," Harrison Police Chief David Hall said in a statement. "And why they're throwing her under the bus is beyond my ability to understand."

The truth of the matter is that local police were called early Friday to Thomas' Westchester County home, where an unidentified 47-year-old man was taken to the hospital and treated for an overdose of sleeping pills. Several media outlets reported that police confirmed it was Thomas who went to the hospital.

But reached on his cell phone Friday, the former NBA star told a reporter he had not been treated for a sleeping pill overdose, and that it was his 17-year-old daughter Lauren who had a medical issue. It "wasn't an overdose," he told the newspaper. "My daughter is very down right now. None of us are OK."

Hall forcefully refuted Thomas' statement. "My cops ... know the difference between a 47-year-old black male and a young black female," Hall said. "These people should learn something from Richard Nixon—it's not the crime, it's the cover-up," he added.

What kind of sick person would humiliate his own daughter in an effort to protect his already scummy image? Meet this week's Asshole of the Week:

Isiah Thomas.

Don't tell me how to do my job!

Nothing gets under my skin more than someone who criticizes how I do my job, without reason. I may be stubborn as hell but I will graciously admit when I am at fault. This is not the case right now, however. This past week, I had the most ridiculous customers stumble into my establishment. Sometimes you can sense when people are going to be trouble, and I knew it the minute I stepped behind that bar and made eye contact.

The day is Sunday, a sacred time for football lovers across the country. There is no better place to be than your local bar, eating and drinking until your heart's content. I would love to be screaming at the flat screens with my fellow Giants fans, yet sadly I am chained behind the bar. I am sure you can imagine how busy it gets so when people are crawling on my bar begging for drinks, I am usually phenomenal at punching out drink orders and making sure everyone is OK. You know what slows my roll back there? When the same customer decides to send their drink back, multiple times. Once, OK. Twice ... you really just can't please them. By the third send back, I proceeded to put the bottles on the bar and told the waitress to make the damn drinks herself because I was obviously inept.

At first she thought I was joking but when I proceeded to leave the bottles at the end of the bar and trek down to help my customers, she realized this was not a game. I actually felt terrible that the poor girl had to deal with them and thought how livid I would be, having to hear them complain. Ha! Little did I know ... I would be hearing soon enough.

I saw someone standing at the end of the bar, and I assumed it was to ask me a question. My assumption was correct, yet the question at hand made the blood in my veins scorch with anger. "Do you even know how to make a decent drink girlie?" W-O-W. Hello, my name is Asshole. For someone who never shuts her mouth, I was absolutely speechless and, amazingly enough, this is not where the story ends. He then instructed me to redo his drink, in front of him, so he could scrutinize what I was doing. Probably the biggest insult of my life. Of course this time the drink was perfect and "that's how it should be done every time." Newsflash, darling ... I make about 100 of those a day, and I didn't do one damn thing different. If seeing is believing, then I'll be sure to scratch out your eyes and stir them around in your drink next time.

Well, Halloween is here already. Can you believe it?! Since I have been getting a lot of e-mail requests lately to include more drink recipes, (cue the collective sigh from all the beer drinkers out there! lol) Since I exist only to serve, here ya go... If you are looking for some spooky cocktails to spice up this year's festivities these should do the trick or treat. (Yikes, that was bad!) First up is Finlandia Vampire Juice. In a tall glass with ice, mix: 2 ozs. Finlandia Lime Vodka, 4 ozs. tomato juice, 1/2 teaspoon fresh horseradish, a splash of steak sauce, a splash of hot sauce and garnish with an eyeball radish. That's the really cool part—To make ice "eyeballs"—Peel radishes, leaving thin streaks of red skin on to represent blood vessels. Using the tip of the vegetable peeler, or a small knife, carefully scoop out a small hole in each radish, roughly the size of an olive. Stuff a green olive, pimiento side out, in each hole. Place one radish eyeball in each section of an empty ice cube tray. Pare the radishes down a bit to fit, if necessary. Fill the tray with water and freeze overnight. You can also try a Vampire Kiss Martini. This bad boy is made with 1 1/2 ozs. of chilled Finlandia Vodka, 1 1/2 ozs. Korbel Champagne and 3/4 oz. Chambord Black Raspberry Liqueur. Rim the glass with red sugar (you can use food coloring.) Pour vodka and half of the Chambord in a martini glass, top with Champagne and pour the remaining Chambord over the back of a spoon to make it float. If you just want to bang back a shot and you're a SoCo and lime person, the only thing they changed is the name: SoCo SLIME. Bartenders will no doubt laugh at this but if you're at home and don't already know, just combine 4 parts Southern Comfort and 1 part Sweetened Lime Juice with ice in a shaker. Shake until well chilled and pour into shot glasses. Lastly, I give you the Chambord Candy Apple Martini. Simply shake 1 oz. Chambord Black Raspberry Liqueur, 1 oz. Finlandia Vodka, 3/4 ozs. apple schnapps and a splash of Tuaca Liqueur with ice and strain into a martini glass. Rim the glass with caramel and garnish with an apple slice. Whatever you decide to do this year, have a blast and be safe. Happy Halloween!

Cheers!

Filmmaker, radio host and metal God

DEE SNIDER

Interview by Chaunce Hayden

When it comes to the best possible Halloween cover story imaginable, few can compete with the legendary rocker Dee Snider. Best known as the frontman for the 1980s heavy metal band Twisted Sister, this outspoken metal God is just as well-known for his music as he is for being a radio personality, television host, author, voice-over artist, screenplay writer, and actor.

Born in Massapequa, New York, Snider learned to sing in the local church choir and the Baldwin High School concert choir. But by the late '70s, Snider had discovered a passion for hard rock and in 1976, after several band changes, formed Twisted Sister. The band had several hits, but their most noted is the rock anthem, "We're Not Gonna Take It" and "I Wanna Rock."

On MTV, Snider is known for hosting "Headbanger's Ball" (originally titled "Heavy Metal Mania"). The first show aired in June 1985 and was hosted by Snider and featured metal news, interviews with metal artists, in-studio co-hosts, etc. ...

Besides a 30-year music career, this married father of four has long been an activist for several causes, including a historic fight to stop music censorship against the Parents Music Resource Center (PMRC) who wanted to introduce a parental warning system that would label all albums containing offensive material. Snider, along with John Denver and Frank Zappa, all protested the proposed warning system. Such a system was never implemented.

In the 1990s, Snider continued to stay contemporary when he formed Widowmaker, with Joe Franco (a good friend to Twisted Sister and drummed on the Love Is for Suckers album), Al Pitrelli, and Marc Russell. They recorded two albums with limited underground success, titled Blood & Bullets and Standby for Pain. Soon after he toured with a "self-tribute" band called Dee Snider's S.M.F.'s (Sick Mother Fuckers), sometimes featuring ex-Twisted Sister drummer A.J. Pero.

In 1998, he penned a song entitled "The Magic of Christmas Day (God Bless Us Everyone)," later to be recorded by Celine Dion to her album These Are Special Times. Later that year, he also wrote and starred in the horror film classic, "Strangeland." The low budget terror flick was Snider's first attempt at creating a full-length film. Today, "Strangeland" has a loyal underground following around the world.

Other credits include being the voice of Gol Acheron, the main villain for the PlayStation 2 video game "Jak and Daxter: The Precursor Legacy." Also, every year since 2004, Dee has narrated a live show known as "Van Helsing's Curse" which tours the U.S. around Halloween giving a mix of famous music with dark overtones and an occasional part of a storytelling to accompany the music. The concert has also been released on CD.

Besides performing and his endless work to raise money for Autism, Snider can be heard hosting his Fangoria radio show on Sirius/XM with horror film legend Debbie Rochon on channel 102. Dee is also the host of the "House of Hair," a syndicated heavy metal/hair band flashback radio show that airs on over 200 radio stations across North America. It is syndicated by the United Stations Radio Networks. The show's format runs two hours and features Snider's closing catchphrase, "If it ain't metal, it's crap!"

I recently had the opportunity to speak with Dee Snider about his passion for horror and metal as well as his candid thoughts on the future of satellite radio. Dee also opens up about what really happened between him and his old friend Howard Stern.

Chaunce Hayden: Why do I get the feeling that Halloween is your favorite holiday?

Dee Snider: I don't know if Halloween is my second favorite or tied for first, which is Christmas. Besides my love for horror and my natural penchant for things that are scary, my daughter Cheyenne was born on Halloween. So that makes it even a bigger party at our house. It's big.

Ten years ago you wrote and produced the horror film, "Strangeland." While it was a labor of love for you, it really never got the acclaim I'm sure you had hoped for. Looking back, did "Strangeland" live up to your expectations?

It did and it didn't. The script was much stronger than the finished product. I had major issues with the director who I won't name by name [John Pieplow]. He's not done anything since then and justifiably so. We actually went to litigation over his failures as a director. But given that it was a $1.1 million film and my first effort, even with his hamstringing the product, I was still pleased overall.

Is the film still available to rent?

Yes. It came out in theaters as a very limited release. Nobody knew what it was. But the minute it went to video it was a top rated video in its class. As a matter fact, it's one of the most stolen videos from video stores.

Will there ever be a sequel?

There was a script all ready to go with the Shooting Gallery, who made the first one. They also made "Slingblade" and "Stand By Me," both Academy Award nominated films. But a CFO was cooking the books, not unlike Enron. So the feds came in and arrested the CFO and locked up everything. My property was actually being held by the federal government for eight years while I fought to get my creative property back at a great expense. But a couple of years later, I got the creative rights back which allowed me to do the sequel. However, now it's like when you're married and all the women want you. But the second you're freed up, it's like, "What happened to them?" That's what happened to "Strangeland." Everyone and their mother were approaching me to make the sequel. But the minute I got the rights back I heard every excuse you could imagine.

What was your favorite excuse why the film couldn't be made?

My favorite was, "Torture films aren't in vogue." First of all, mine was the first torture film. There would be no "Saw" or "Hostile" without my movie. Here I have Robert Englund attached to the movie to continue and reprise his role as Jackson Roth. A few years back, I ran into Robert at a horror convention and he said, "Dude, 'Strangeland' is a bonafide cult hit!" He said, "I've been traveling the world promoting 'Freddy vs. Jason' and every signing I go to around the world, I'm signing copies of 'Strangeland.'"

That's got to make it all seem worth the hard work on some level.

It makes me feel great. But at the same time, why can't the studios appreciate or get the value of the movie and cough up the money to make the sequel?

How much money are you talking about?

The first one was made for $1.1 million. So the bar would have to be raised for the second one. You can't come back weaker than you were the first time. So I'm guessing we could have made it for between $3.5 to $5 million. That depends on the actors you're going to get to play the roles.

In your heart, will there ever be a sequel to "Strangeland"?

I had given up sounding like a broken record for 10 years saying, "It's coming, it's coming!" and it never comes. But just the other day I had reconnected with Larry Meistrich, who was one of the former heads of the Shooting Gallery. He got completely destroyed in the mess that his CFO created. He always believed me and I knew his career just took a shit after that.

"Metal is the cockroach of the music world. It lives in the alleys and cracks and underground where it thrives. You can't kill it."

VIDEO GAME REVIEWS

The hottest new games in town!

Ultra-violent possibilities nearly unlimited in 'Saints Row 2'

Publisher: THQ
System: Xbox 360
Cost: $59.99
Rating: Mature
Review Rating: ☆☆☆☆

Both the "Saints Row" and "GTA" franchises have been in a bitter battle for consumer dollars ever since "Saints Row" was introduced. While "GTA 4" has taken a grittier and more realistic approach to being a gangster, "Saints Row 2" introduces much-needed humor to "a bit of the old ultra-violence."

Up-and-coming virtual street thugs take on the role of the leader of the 3rd Street Saints gang as he recovers from the events of the first game. Since his face was damaged, the players are free to create their own character and customize everything from race to hairstyle to width of the nose. Afterwards, it's time to break out of prison and reclaim the streets of Stilwater.

Instead of having to discover and unlock activities, dozens of them are available right from the start. Want to compete in street races, commit insurance fraud or "tag" spots with your gang's logo? Would you rather follow missions against rival gangs? There are so many activities to try, jumps and diversions to find, spots to tag and places to explore that it is easy to become overwhelmed.

Up to 12 players can compete online in standard deathmatches or my favorite mode, Strong Arm. This mode combines several activities from the single-player adventure and pits two teams against each other to see who can earn the most cash. Set in different parts of Stilwater, with "innocent bystanders" included, you never know what might happen.

The coolest online mode is the ability to play the entire game in two-player co-op, missions. If you thought creating virtual havoc by yourself was fun, wait until you and a bro decide to decimate the city while playing "Saints Row 2."

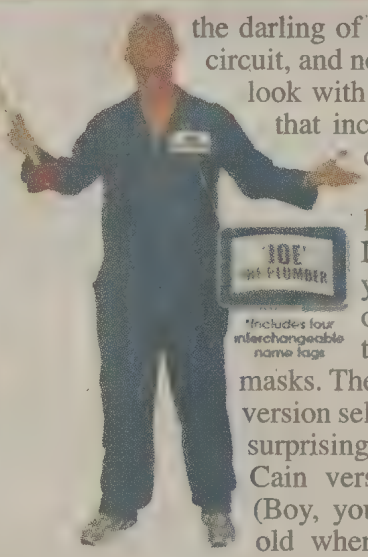
FASHION forward

by Krys Longari

The year of a presidential election always provides plenty of humorous fodder for Halloween costumes, and this year is no different. With two such diametrically opposed candidates, you just know that the Democrats and the Republicans will be using October 31st as one last campaign platform, either to stump for their choice, or discredit the other party's guy. And this season could not provide more interesting dress-up choices if we were living in an Oliver Stone film. We have Barack Obama, the nation's first black presidential candidate; John McCain, who, if elected, will be the oldest American president in history; Sarah Palin, a former beauty queen who has single-handedly revived the coolness quotient of Saturday Night Live; and Joe Biden, who...well OK, neither his appearance nor career make for much of a costume. But still, three out of four ain't bad!

If you haven't bought your Halloween costume yet, don't despair. Believe it or not, you still have time to get together an awesome look. Ricky's Halloween shops have a full range of seasonal supplies to make you look like your favorite celebrity, movie character, sexy diva, or scary monster. Ricky's has 27 stores in Manhattan and three in New Jersey, including a location at 861 Route 17 South in Paramus, telephone 201/444-7438. You can find the shop closest to you by surfing to www.rickyshalloween.com, and if you don't want to leave your house in case early trick-or-treaters are stopping by, you can order on-line as well. You can even have your costume shipped overnight.

If you want to showcase your political side along with your great gams, you can buy the Sarah Palin costume, which provides a Miss Alaska sash and the VP candidate's trademark glasses for $22.99. Finding a jingoistic bikini is your responsibility, however, as is managing to create her take-me-seriously updo. Looking to show your support of the common man? Joe the Plumber was the darling of the presidential debate circuit, and now you can channel his look with a head to toe costume that includes a jumpsuit, bald cap, name tag holder, and yes, even the toilet plunger for $49.99. If you want to keep your look simple, put on a suit and one of these rubber candidate masks. The toothy Barack Obama version sells for $19.99, while the surprisingly flattering John McCain version goes for $24.99. (Boy, you know you're getting old when a plastic version of your face looks better than the real thing.)



If you're sick of the political scene, you can still make a striking impression with this Rehab Queen costume (read: Amy Winehouse), which includes the dress and beehive wig for $69.99. Starving yourself down to drug addict weight optional. And I think this Daphne costume—you know, from Scooby Doo cartoons—is just adorable. For $39.99 you get the red-haired wig, flowing scarf, purple mini dress, and boot tops. If one of your friends or neighbors has a talking Great Dane you can borrow for the night, you'll definitely win Best Overall Costume. Whatever you do this Halloween, here's hoping you have a great night that ends in plenty of treats.

Do you have a style dilemma you would like resolved? Any questions or comments can be e-mailed to K[illegible]

SPORTS ROUND-UP

Should Favre Be Trusted?

You wouldn't want Brett Favre flying your airplane, removing your gallbladder or doing your income taxes. You don't want a guy taking the kind of chances he does in the course of his daily duties when it is your life, your body, your money on the line.

But when the only thing at stake is three hours of your time, give or take a few minutes, on a Sunday afternoon, you could do worse than to put that time into the right hand and arm of Brett Favre.

The Jets knew this when they picked him up during the preseason to replace the ever-cautious, cerebral and pragmatic Chad Pennington. They knew that at the very least, Favre would sell a few PSLs to the new stadium, throw a few picks—or even 10, as he has in the past five games—and maybe cost them a game or two along the way.

They also knew, if nothing else, that Favre would breathe some life into a franchise that has been a disappointment for as long as many of us can remember, and hoped he might even cause them to look ahead to a Super Bowl for a change, rather than back at the one that took place nearly four decades ago.

For nearly 57 minutes yesterday, Favre was no better than the third-best quarterback in Giants Stadium, outplayed by young Tyler Thigpen on the other side of the field and outshined by his predecessor, old Joe Namath, upstairs in the press box for yet another tribute to the only Jets team that truly matters, even 40 years later.

The Jets were trailing the Kansas City Chiefs—if not the worst team in football, then damned close to it—by three points with 3:01 to go, and that was largely the fault of their quarterback.

What happened in the next two minutes is indisputable. The Jets moved the football the requisite 46 yards, got it into the end zone thanks to a one-handed grab by Laveranues Coles, and escaped the ignominy of back-to-back losses to miserable teams with a 28-24 victory—although whether that was because of or despite Favre certainly is open to question.

"Stick a fork in me," an exhausted Favre was overheard muttering to a man in the family group waiting for him outside the Jets' locker room after the game, but whether he is done is open to dispute as well.

What cannot be argued is that whatever fate awaits the Jets this year, good or bad, will trace back to the play of Brett Favre.

"For 39, I don't feel so bad," he said. "I still feel like I can throw with the best of them. I know one thing: I go down swinging, however that may be."

For most of the game, Favre was chasing Thigpen, a second-year player with two career losses and a miserable 44.3 passer rating who got the start only because Herman Edwards had no other healthy body to throw out there against his old team.

And yet with 3:01 to play, it was Thigpen who had played error-free football, with two touchdown passes, and Favre who—with the ball just nine yards from what probably would have been a game-icing score—had committed the usually mortal sin of throwing a Pick Six in the red zone that gave the Chiefs a 24-21 fourth-quarter lead.

The Giants Stadium crowd had been booing Favre intermittently since he bounced a third-down pass to Jerricho Cotchery in the second quarter, and they really let him have it after Brandon Flowers took his careless flip over the middle 91 yards the other way for the go-ahead touchdown.

But Favre, whose final pass as a Green Bay Packer was the interception that ultimately put the Giants in the Super Bowl, has had too many moments like that and too many games like this to begin conceding this one to a team as bad as the Chiefs.

"I'm always concerned about [interceptions]," said Favre, whose next one will be his 300th, adding to his all-time NFL career record. Of course, to that point in the game, he also had 454 touchdown passes, also a career record.

"We all try to reduce mistakes," he said, "But at some point, you gotta cut it loose."

Or as Favre's former Packers teammate and current Jets teammate Bubba Franks told him after the pick, "Just keep slinging it, kid."

So the kid kept slinging it, 18 yards to Chansi Stuckey on second-and-15, five yards to Dustin Keller on first-and-10, eight yards to Washington on second-and-5, and finally, 15 yards to Coles on the kind of pass the Jets brought Brett Favre here to complete, the one that won them a ballgame they nearly lost.

Or, more accurately, a game Brett Favre nearly lost. You might not want to let him near the keys to your car or the PIN to your bank account, but if there's a football game to be won, you could do worse than ask Brett Favre to win it for you.

MORSELS

By Mike Morse

As the presidential election draws near, Americans want to learn more about the two candidates. Luckily, I was able to interview both Barack Obama and John McCain by offering to buy them lunch at the Tick Tock Diner in Clifton, N.J. (Luckily, both men are huge fans of french fries with gravy). Sitting in a booth near the back of the establishment, I turned on my tape recorder and let the conversation go where it may ...

ME: Now, Senator Obama, I'd like to ask you about—

McCAIN: Excuse me, did you check to see if they have an early-bird special? I'm over 65, so I'm entitled to an early-bird special.

ME:: No, I didn't check. Now, Senator Obama ...

McCAIN: Sure, you don't give a crap if the taxpayers have to pay full price for this meal. You're probably one of them Socialists...

ME: Actually, I'm paying for the meal ...

OBAMA: Under my plan, you'd be paying less for this meal, providing you make under $250,000 and you're not some a-hole plumber named Joe ...

ME:: Let's not worry about the meal. I'd like to ask both of you about—

McCAIN: Hey, I've got to drain the lizard!

ME:: The bathroom is right over there.

McCAIN: (Strange look on his face, then a look of relief) Never mind. Mission accomplished. Would one of you pinko humps mind changing me?

OBAMA: Now, look. When I advocated change, I wasn't talking about some old geezer's Depends.

ME:: I was hoping to ask both of you about your plans to revive the economy.

OBAMA: Great question. I plan to smile warmly at the economy, then firmly grab its shoulder as it tells me about its problems. I'll nod caringly, and before you know it, the economy will feel good about itself again and vote for me. That's the way it's been working for me so far.

ME: Well, you are charismatic, senator. But the economy won't recover just by you—

McCAIN: Bill Ayers! Reverend Wright! Lee Harvey Oswald!

OBAMA: OK, old man! I've had enough of your crap! Let's do it! (The two men begin fighting, knocking over several tables in the diner.)

ME: Ow! Damn! That french fry gravy is hot! Oww!

Well, that's my interview. On the bright side, thanks to John McCain, we did get a 20 percent senior citizen discount on our meals.

RIDE-STUFF

Well, the cold weather is officially upon us and in another four weeks this column will once again morph into my annual snow sports coverage—SnoNation. It's been happening now every year for nearly 15 years but this year will mark a definite change in terms of my attitude when it comes to winter moto riding. I have always known that the risk level of riding in cold weather goes up exponentially from that of fair weather, but this year I have determined that it is too high a risk for me to take, (once the temp dips into consistent 30's.) So, knowing that street motorcycle riding begins with a need to know your risk comfort level in the first place, the basic description of my new attitude is "lower risk threshold." To be honest, it comes directly from my constant thinking of the well being of my two adorable kids and lovely wife. I want to be there for them and the traffic in the area we live can be VERY unforgiving to a biker. Though I am not the guy who stops riding altogether while I raise my family, (though I have much respect for those that do) my riding habits have been radically altered for certain, in a good way. Simply put–I ride to stay alive and enjoy being on my mount every second. Just like many of you, I am sure! Which brings me to my next observation; Whether due to the high gas prices we saw earlier this year or whatever actually motivated people to get into the saddle in '08, I definitely noticed more bikes on the NYC metro area roadways this season. Interestingly, I have seen a good number of these riders remaining on the roads later into the season than I ever recall. I think that is a great thing but there are a couple of items I feel compelled to warn you about. First of all, if you feel on occasion, (gasp, choke!) like you are invisible to other road users when riding, that is pretty much the case all of the time when you ride in the cold. Drivers, whether consciously or unconsciously, just do not expect a bike to be out amongst them when they themselves are donning heavy coats and cranking the heat in their vehicles. Another thing to be very mindful of is your traction or lack thereof, in cold weather. Even when your tires are warmed up, the asphalt (and even more so, concrete) reacts much differently than when it's warm and sunny out. Your tires will break away much quicker if you overdraw on your traction reserve. So ride less aggressively and just overcompensate a bit like how you might if you got caught in a sudden rain. Just be careful out there if you are riding through the cold months. I am so psyched to see our numbers growing out there and want to keep everyone in the game for as long as possible.

This will NOT be me this winter!

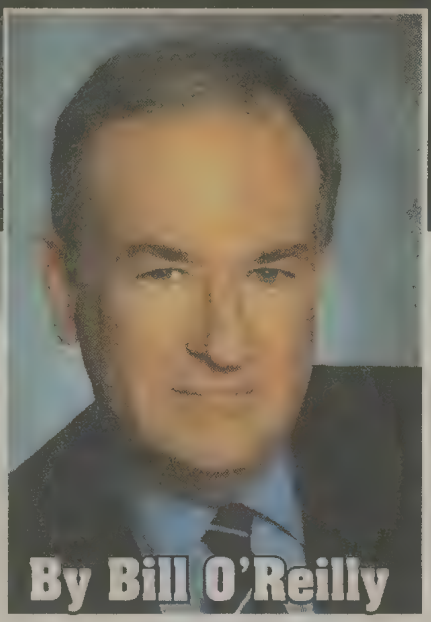
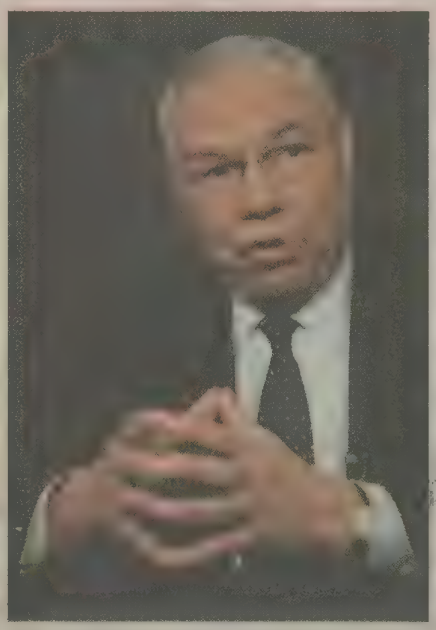
Talking Points



By Bill O'Reilly

The Powell Endorsement



After Gen. Colin Powell endorsed Barack Obama last week, I got to thinking about Powell, who is kind of a mystery to me. Of course he's a patriot. He has served his country well in the military and also as Secretary of State under President Bush. No question, Powell loves America and has contributed greatly to it.

And I have no problem with his support of Sen. Obama. Powell is simply exercising his voting freedom, so more power to him. The problem is the general's explanation for defecting from his party.

On NBC's "Meet the Press," Powell said he was angry that some extreme right-wingers have called Obama a Muslim, and that he feels the Republican establishment has been disrespectful toward the senator. OK, there have been some absurd things said about Obama, but John McCain has challenged them publicly, and has even rejected bringing up the Rev. Wright as a campaign issue, feeling it is too divisive.

It seems to me that McCain is rejecting ugly politics and is the guy running against Obama, not some nut shouting invective at a rally. What is also dubious is Powell's lack of fair play. Obama recently appeared on MSNBC's "Countdown with Keith Olbermann," whose host has called McCain a "fraud" and accused him of "tacitly inciting lunatics to violence."

That assertion is absurd and grossly irresponsible. So why would Obama go on a program like that? Shouldn't Powell be concerned about it? And then there is the Daily Kos. As readers of this column may remember, I chastised the democratic presidential contenders last summer for attending the Kos convention in Washington. Obama, Hillary Clinton and others lent their credibility to a website that routinely revels in hatred. For example, the Kos posted a disgusting picture of Sen. Joseph Lieberman about to engage in a sex act with President Bush and displayed it for more than year.

When Tony Snow's fatal cancer returned, the website allowed a posting that said the world "would be better off without him."

And most recently, the Daily Kos put forth that Sarah Palin's teenage daughter, not the governor herself, gave birth to the Down syndrome baby. It doesn't get any worse than that.

Again, Obama visited the Kos convention and mingled with these vicious character assassins. I respectfully submit to Gen. Powell: That visit is as troubling as anything that has happened in the Republican precincts.

I know Powell only slightly, but I believe his endorsement of Obama really stems from two things he did not say. First, Obama has cultivated Powell, treating him with respect, asking for his advice.

Secondly, Powell remains bitter over the way he was treated by the Bush administration and some rank-and-file Republican stalwarts. The friction between Powell and the so-called "neo-cons" has been widely reported.

I think that's the true story behind Powell's shift to the Democrats. The Muslim factor has nothing to do with it.

Story by Laurie Kaplan

BEST PLACES TO CRAP YOUR PANTS!

The days are getting shorter, the smell of a wood burning fireplace looms in the crisp air, and jack-o'-lanterns are ablaze ... it's Halloween and 'tis the season to scare or get scared by someone ... or something.

Throughout the area, it's hard to escape the endless supply of lame-ass haunted hayrides, corn mazes, etc. For me, however, I would rather avoid all of this fake fuss and give the real deal a chance to show face. I have few goals in life aside from writing, drinking and being merry, but one thing that I place high up on a pedestal is to see a full body apparition ... a ghost ... the Holy Grail!

I once took a quiz on MySpace to see what religion I should be based on what I believe. Apparently, I should be Pagan because I believe in all of this shit. For whatever reason, I just can't help it. The idea of communicating with the dead really intrigues me. Understandably, not everyone shares my views on ghosts. After all, seeing is believing. But not for me! Not to be confused with being gullible, as I certainly don't swallow every ghost story as truth, I am a believer without having seen anything paranormal with my own two eyes ... yet.

This is why I have compiled a list of places to visit in order to give my statistics of seeing one a fighting chance. And for those skeptics, these places may be of some fun for you as well because these places offer enjoyment, if not for the thrill of a haunt, enjoyable day or night out to a place filled with legend and folklore.

One of the best towns to visit for a supernatural experience is Cape May. Founded in 1620, there are plenty of years to account for a few haunts.

The Queen's Hotel, located at 601 Columbia Ave., is a Victorian bed and breakfast with three floors, 11 rooms and the ghost of a young prostitute. That's right, a whore often visits the third floor and taunts women as they walk by her in the hallways. Other experiences include a strong aroma of perfume that waffs through the rooms, cold spots in the air when she's around, and objects and furniture moving by themselves.

The South Mansion Inn, located at 720 Washington St. is another of these haunted bed and breakfast's in Cape May. It is said that the niece of the builder, Ester Mercur, who died in the mansion, haunts the inn today. She is said to be a nice ghost, with reports of hearing her laugh, seeing her dance, and hearing her petticoat as her presence moves by. She is often seen in the kitchen. A few other unknown entities have also been reported.

Cape May is home to many other hot spots of spirit activity, and this is why they have ghost tours throughout the town from May through November.

Recently, Garrett Husveth, a court-approved forensic examiner who has been investigating paranormal phenomenon throughout the United States as a hobby for the past 21 years, visited the RiverVale Library to talk about ghostly haunts in New Jersey.

Although there are many places claiming to be haunted, Husveth claims to have learned from his experience over the past 21 years that they are not all true, especially those depicted on television. He and his partners are in the process of writing a book called "Historic Haunts of New Jersey" and were scheduled to begin filming a haunting investigation series for TV this past spring. For more information on hauntings in New Jersey, visit their Web site, www.haunted-newjersey.com.

Last weekend I was exploring haunted towns in Bucks County, Pa., but to no prevail. I have yet to see an apparition but I haven't given up hope just yet. In the meantime though, to fill the void, I will continue to park my ass on the couch and watch Ghost Hunters religiously every Wednesday night.

But with that, I'll say Happy Halloween to everyone!

Steppin' Out

Steppin' Out Under the Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your usual tricks and treats can't save you this Halloween. No more strutting around in a tight red devil dress, kissing strangers in the streets, bobbing for apples when it's not your turn.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your inner solidity may be shaken by intense emotions and flashes of voluptuous darkness, but now is not the time to fuss over your own moods. Instead, use your famous earthiness and heightened powers of intuition to help those around you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Halloween starts off entertainingly enough for you. Excitement is in the air, people are making hilarious fools of themselves, and there's lots of bizarre activity for your brain to munch on.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Take your moody, hypersensitive little selves and cower in that shell. Midnight would be a good time for you to be at home, alone.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your trademark swagger and imperious popularity should get you through Halloween intact, but expect to feel off-kilter throughout the upcoming months.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) If you attend a retro-themed Halloween party, the decorations won't be cheesy enough for your clever tastes. The feast won't be quite as bloody as you'd like it to be.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your ability to simultaneously accept the inevitability of darkness and find the calm place in chaos will be invaluable in the wee hours of morning.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Embrace the Eve of the Dead with all the morbid languidness you can muster. And be certain to dress up like a vampire–it's your destiny.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Feeling confused? Don't expect that to change this Halloween. You may have much to contemplate and many rivers to cross, but keep your sense of humour honed and ready.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While persons of lesser integrity and zeal waste away the evening with masquerade balls and martinis, you'll hide in your basement laboratory, perfecting a recipe for making gold out of lead.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Halloween brings pleasant surprises. Don your most eccentric costume, let down your guard for a few hours, and join the celebration.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You can't conjure up the decisiveness to select a costume, much less figure out which parties to hit. Use the last image in your daydream as a guide to your most advantageous All Hallow's Eve decision.

"SAW V"

Jigsaw (Tobin Bell) might be dead, but his traps live on in this fifth "Saw" entry. Forensics expert Hoffman (Costas Mandylor) is seemingly the last person alive to carry on the Jigsaw legacy. But when his secret is threatened, Hoffman must go on the hunt to eliminate all loose ends. Cast: Tobin Bell, Scott Patterson, Costas Mandylor, Julie Benz, Betsy Russell, Mark Roiston, Carlo Rota, Greg Bryk, Laura Gordon, Meagan Good. 1 hour, 28 minutes. Rated R. 🎃🎃🎃

"THE HAUNTING OF MOLLY HARTLEY"

Molly Hartley (Haley Bennett) discovers that her parents made a pact with the devil to save her life. Something evil lurks just beneath the lush surfaces of her private school world—and it holds the rights to her very soul. Now, on the eve of her 18th birthday when the devil comes to collect, Molly Hartley is about to discover the truth of just who—or rather what—she is destined to become. Cast: Haley Bennett, Jake Weber, Chace Crawford, Shanna Collins, Shannon Marie Woodward m AnnaLynne McCord, Marin Hinkle, Jessica Lowndes. 1 hour, 26 minutes. Rated PG-13. 🎃🎃🎃

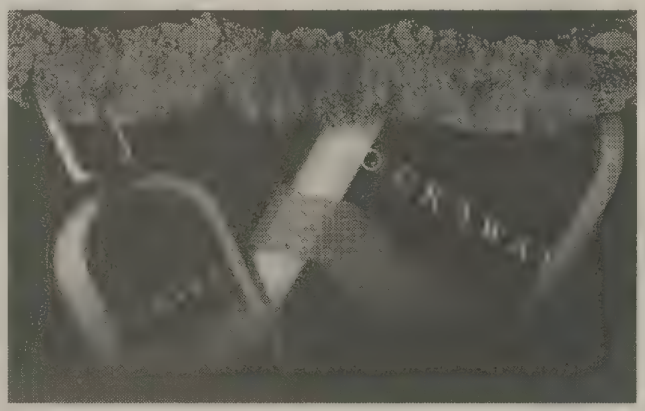
Wine Talk

The Lowdown on High Alcohol Content

This is a tale of two wineries. The first is Rodney Strong, long a bastion of well-balanced value wines from Sonoma County. The second is Silver Oak Cellars, a cabernet sauvignon specialist located in the Napa Valley, and an icon long before that term slipped into everyday use around the Napa Valley.



Rodney Strong's public relations man, Robert Larsen, e-mailed to ask if I would like to taste the winery's new Rockaway Vineyard cabernet. There was a time when I would have been all over it. But I hesitated.

I remembered a conversation with winemaker Rick Sayre some months ago, and his reaction when I complimented him on the balance Rodney Strong wines had exhibited over the many vintages I had been tasting them. The anguished look on his face told me all I needed to know.

Sayre had come onto my radio show to tell me all about Rodney Strong's "winery within a winery." From his expression, I knew what was coming next. The winery within a winery concept had been developed to produce wines with more concentration and power. And, yes, higher levels of alcohol.

I reminded Larsen of that conversation when I declined a sample of the Rockaway cabernet, explaining that I doubted it would be a wine I would find commendable. But to be fair, I asked about the alcohol level. After all, I could have misread the reaction on Sayre's face when we had been discussing balance.

The answer was 15.4 percent. You've got it. A Sonoma County red table wine, a cabernet sauvignon meant to be served with a meal, at 15.4 percent alcohol. And that's only what's stated on the label. The rules allow a generous fudge factor, so in reality this wine could be close to 16 percent alcohol and still list 15.4. There is nothing balanced about a wine such as this, no matter what the folks at the winery might say.

So the question is why? Why would Rodney Strong jump on the high alcohol bandwagon at this stage of the game, when the pendulum appears to be swinging back toward wines of finesse rather than wines of power?

The obvious answer is ratings. The perceived wisdom of California winemakers is that Jim Laube, the chief reviewer for the wine magazine The Wine Spectator, favors opulent, powerful, high-alcohol wines in his ratings. Larsen denies this was the motive, but I'm of the opinion I'm right and he's spinning the company line.

Now we pivot across the Mayacamas Mountains to the Napa Valley, and Silver Oak Cellars. Shortly after my e-mail exchange with Rodney Strong's Larsen, I stopped by Silver Oak to see the new winery, rebuilt following a devastating fire in 2006.

I sat down to taste with winemaker Daniel Baron and we went through three vintages of Silver Oak's Alexander Valley and Napa Valley cabernet sauvignons. Included was the exquisite 2004 vintage, the latest release, and both wines from this very good year were impressive.

Each had wonderful aromatics, excellent weight and depth on the palate, silky tannin, and exceptional persistence of flavor, with a lingering finish. It's no wonder hundreds of devoted wine enthusiasts descend upon the winery each year for the cultish "New Release" event.

Baron formed much of his winemaking philosophy while working in Bordeaux at chateaux such as Petrus and Canon-La-Gaffeliere. He understands grapes can be perfectly ripe at sugar levels that won't produce massive amounts of alcohol. His ideas dovetailed nicely with those of the late Justin Meyer, the founding winemaker at Silver Oak.

So you won't be surprised that Silver Oak's 2004 Alexander Valley Cabernet Sauvignon comes in at a modest 13 percent alcohol. The 2004 Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon registers 13.9. These are majestic wines that are beautiful with food, or even on their own.

Why does Silver Oak do it? Well, my guess is the powers that be know great wine when they make it. And they're not terribly worried about their Wine Spectator score.

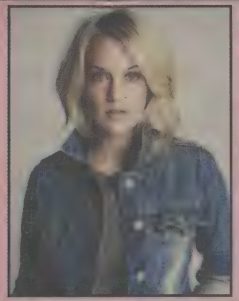
GAVIN ROSSDALE WANTS GWEN BLOOD-SOAKED

Gavin Rossdale wants his wife Gwen Stefani to dress up as a blood-soaked nurse. The rocker admits he is too shy to don a costume this Halloween, but fantasizes about seeing Stefani in a sexy medical uniform. He said: "She is really good at that dressing up stuff. I'm English so we're too uptight to be good at that stuff. I'd like us to dress as a doctor and nurse but covered in blood. That's great. So anything to do with blood would probably be good." Rossdale, who revealed he will be going to a party organized by Stefani's brother this Halloween, also says his two-year-old son Kingston has several animal-themed outfits to wear on the ghoulish holiday. He added in the interview with gossip website JustJared.com: "Kingston has, like, three outfits. He's got a rhino, a tiger and I think an elephant, so he's got to choose between them. We keep rotating them. He's got style like his mom."



CARRIE UNDERWOOD & JESSICA SIMPSON: IT'S ALL GOOD

Feud? What feud? Carrie Underwood insists there is no bad blood between her and Jessica Simpson. A few months ago, Underwood claimed that her ex Tony Romo, who is now dating Jessica, still keeps in touch with her. "The phone will ring and it'll be him, and I'll maybe not answer," said Underwood. Simpson was quick to respond claiming her boyfriend has never called his ex and she know this because she checks his phone. When reporters recently asked Carrie about the feud, she downplayed the whole thing saying, "I met her once and she seemed really nice so I don't have a feud with anybody."

JUSTIN TIMBERLAKE TO COLLABORATE WITH KYLIE MINOGUE

Justin Timberlake has announced he is to collaborate on a track with Kylie Minogue on his next album. The pop superstar performed at the 2003 Brit Awards and now Timberlake says he wants to work with Kylie on a track for his forthcoming album. "I am a huge fan of Kylie's music and I have always wanted to work with her," he said. "I am excited about the opportunity to collaborate with such a talented artist and to have her on the album is a real bonus. I can't wait to get started."

PETE WENTZ'S DEATH WATCH

Pete Wentz, the 29-year-old Fall Out Boy bassist, has revealed record company bosses feared he would follow in the footsteps of rock legends Janis Joplin, Jim Morrison and Kurt Cobain by dying at that age because he was taking so many drugs. He said: "I spent most of the year I was 27 toxic, just completely over-medicated. I was stoked to make it past 27. Everyone was really worried. My management company were panicked, because I was out of the office, and 'pharmaceutically engaged.'" Guitarist and singer Patrick Stump added the management team could barely contain their relief when Pete turned 28. He said: "There was a countdown clock and everything. I remember, our manager called me up on Pete's 28th birthday and screamed, 'We made it!'"

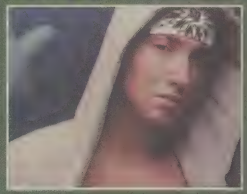
DR. PEPPER & GUNS N' ROSES PROMISE WON'T GO FLAT

Dr Pepper is bringing out the big guns, confirming they will uphold their grandiose and somewhat opportunistic pledge to provide each and every American citizen with a can of the soft drink should Guns N' Roses deliver their long-awaited Chinese Democracy album before the end of 2008. Though the announcement was made back in March, when such a promise seemed like a stellar publicity ploy that would not necessarily require follow-through, Axl Rose & Co. recently confirmed the perpetually delayed album, their first in 15 years, would be released Nov. 23. In terms of their deal, the Dr is still in. "We never thought this day would come," the brand's VP of marketing, Tony Jacobs, said. "But now that it's here all we can say is: The Dr Pepper's on us." Fans who want to cash in on the libation donation will have a short window of opportunity. Vsit DrPepper.com on Nov. 23, the day of the album's release, and register for a coupon redeemable for a 20-ounce bottle. The coupon will only be available for the first 24 hours of Chinese Democracy's release and expires Feb. 28.

HOMELESS MAN EARNS $4,000 FOR FINDING SIR PAUL McCARTNEY'S HEAD

Homeless man Anthony Silva has claimed a $4,000 reward after finding the waxwork head of Sir Paul McCartney in a bin at Reading, England train station. The rendition of the former Beatles man's head was left on a train last Thursday (Oct. 16) by Joby Carter, who had been transporting it to be auctioned. Silva told the Daily Star that when he found the head in the bin he initially thought it was a Halloween mask—but after realizing what he had found, claimed the $4,000 reward from Carter. "It's just what I need and I hope my luck has changed for the better," Silva said. Carter, meanwhile, said he hoped to make his $4,000 back and then some when the head is auctioned. "I'll be gutted if it only goes for peanuts now," he said. "With the interest we've had, I'm confident it may go for more than $20,000."

EMINEM CAME UP WITH HIS NAME SLIM SHADY WHILE HE WAS ON THE TOILET



Eminem was on the toilet when he came up with his nickname Slim Shady. The rapper finds his bathroom an inspiring place where he comes up with a lot of ideas. He said: "I was sitting on the toilet and a lot of good material came out of that. This name popped into my head. I was kind of skinny and I thought it should be something slim. And then for some reason, Slim Shady popped into my mind and I just thought of 20 things to rhyme with it. I just thought, 'This is it.' I went back in the room and just kept writing." Eminem has also revealed the point when he decided it was time to turn his life around. The hip-hop star pleaded guilty to carrying a concealed weapon during a fight outside a nightclub and was sentenced to one year's probation and community service in June 2001. He added: "I think I made a decision when I was sitting in the back of the cop car. But when I got through it, I was like, 'I can't act like an idiot anymore. I got kids.'"

Infernophonic

Interview by Chantal Gabel

Infernophonic is the epitome of all there is to love about hard rock, with intense fusions of soul and metal from a band with energy as hot as an inferno itself. The powerful voice of front vixen Elaine Tuttle, and the fierce, blended sounds of Pat Piegari's guitar riffs, Kevin Bolembach's deep bass and Ross Kantor's merciless back-beat are the reasons their debut album Spark it Up has been so successful.

Formed as recently as 2006, Infernophonic is the pet-project of former Non-Fiction bass player Bolembach, who hand-picked each member exclusively. No stranger to the New Jersey rock scene and a firm believer in preserving the authenticity of rock music, he explained he wanted to "revisit the different styles of groups like Led Zeppelin and Black Sabbath" who influenced him. While there's no doubting the presence of Sabbath and Zeppelin, Infernophonic is a melting pot of fine musical influence that is proof it takes each member to make a band successful, something Bolembach takes pride in. "We all came from different schools and you can hear that in our songs," he said. "We kind of sit the fence, we're not commercial. We've got elements of all styles."

In Spark it Up, Tuttle's pipes lend a soulful R&B sound (think Janis Joplin meets Aretha Franklin), and the combination of Piegari's heavy but not too metal sound with a Deep Purple meets Led Zeppelin backdrop, and you have an unconventional masterpiece with John Lennon-esque lyrics that focus on spirituality.

"When it's all said and done, we're proud of the record," said Bolembach. "I want to do another one, but I'm almost afraid it wouldn't stand up to this one." He explained Spark it Up was a collaborative effort from start to finish, a venture that included different writing processes to produce their "cut and dry lyrics with Elaine's layers and melodies."

Apparently newcomers and followers have been impressed, given the rave reviews of their album, (one fan writes, "If you like classic rock on the heavy funky side with rockin' female vocals that don't sound like you're at the opera ... you will probably love this CD.") the reactions of the crowd to Tuttle's sex appeal, and the overall energy that heats up the entire place the minute the band starts ripping. Even Bolembach can't deny their ability to lure the crowd. "We're a pretty solid live band. We're adept at what we do," he said. With hits like "Eye of the Jedi," a Star Wars-inspired song, or the intense guitar solo in "Thank You," reminiscent of Jimi Hendrix, it won't be long before Infernophonic becomes a house-hold name of the New Jersey rock scene, if they're not already.

Bolembach said he already had "a little carting and disappointment" with a major label in his time with Non-Fiction, but he wouldn't mind if the band could get a small label behind them. "I'm glad we could get some records out, but it'd be great to get bigger and help develop and maintain original rock music in Northern New Jersey."

Infernophonic plays the tri-state area and frequents joints that thrive off of classic rock, such as Whiskey Bar in Hoboken. Upcoming dates and their songs can be viewed and heard on their MySpace page at www.myspace.com/Infernophonic.

AC/DC "Black Ice"

Eight years between albums is an eternity for rock bands. But somehow, eight years doesn't feel too long to wait for AC/DC. When they deliver an album as satisfying and fortifying as Black Ice, their timing feels just right.

Having sold more than 200 million albums worldwide, with Back in Black alone selling 42 million copies, Black Ice figures to top the charts as well, despite being sold exclusively at WalMart, Sam's Club and their website.

THE GOOD: "Rock 'N Roll Train" - A dynamite opener with an unmistakable Angus Young riff and thumping beat that is undeniably AC/DC. "Big Jack" - An up-tempo stomper with power chords that stumble overtop one another and land in all the right places. "Decibel" - A delicious, grinding, thumping bit of bay boy, blues-rock. The bound-to-be strip club anthem "She Likes Rock 'N Roll" is a sexy, sizzling piece of rock goodness that's got a riff as memorable as any AC/DC has ever laid down. "Stormy May Day" - Begins with a Zeppelin-esque slide guitar, before a Sturm und Drang eruption. On "Black Ice," Phil Rudd finally explodes on the drums and shows you what tom rolls are really meant for.

THE AVERAGE: "War Machine" - Sports a similar chord progression to "Givin' the Dog a Bone," but with more bite. "Skies On Fire" - A stark drum beat gives way to a tangled chordal guitar riff. The syncopated beat of the verse is a bit different for AC/DC, but it works. "Rock 'N Roll Dream" - While not an actual ballad, is toned down and somewhat introspective, reminiscent of the Bon Scott-era "Ride On."

THE BAD: A couple come close.

FRANKLY: AC/DC returns with a release full of typically straightforward songs about fighting, women and rock 'n' roll. Black Ice is the perfect album for rock fans who want that classic AC/DC feel.

Anyway, now he's back and he has a new company called Neshat and his producing movies again. He said to me, "Dude, let's do it." But I'm not going to get too excited until production starts. However, if anyone gets it and knows the value of "Strangeland," it's Larry. I'm very optimistic that we're going to get this thing done.

Let's talk about Twisted Sister. Although the band is back and playing together, do you find the people in the audience are those still alive from the '80s or are you attracting a new generation of fans?

With the young people it seems they know the band but in a backward kind of way. They know Twisted Sister because of "Strangeland." Many times I'll have young people come up to me and say, "I don't know much about your band but fuck, I love that movie!"

Are you insulted by that?

No way. It's the best thing I could hear because it makes me feel I was vital to somebody other than always doing the same thing. I'm proud of my past, but it's great to be able to do something new that affects people.

You're considered one of the Gods of metal. You look at punk, grunge, new wave, disco ... they've all come and gone. Yet, metal lives on and on. Why?

Metal is the cockroach of the music world. It lives in the alleys and cracks and underground where it thrives. You can't kill it. The more you try and kill it, the more it thrives. But that said, there was a time when we almost killed it. We really did. For a short time metal was really in vogue and it went mainstream and that's when it nearly died. I'm talking about the late '80s and the hair metal groups. That watered down version of metal. Metal needs to be the sound that fights to stay alive. It needs to fight for airtime. But the late '80s and early '90s were ugly metal. It became too popular. Bands like Soundgarden where being described as a metal band. No, they're not! They're grunge!

What so-called metal band makes you want to vomit?

One? A lot of the Slaughter's and Firehouses and Danger Danger's make me go, "What didn't you get? What didn't you get about heavy metal?" I'll be honest now. I'm about to slander a state icon in the state of New Jersey. I'm talking about Bon Jovi. My wife thinks I hate the guy because he's handsome and I'm not. I have to admit, that's probably true. But Sebastian Bach once said, "What the fuck is with this happy metal? What is with all the smiling? There's no smiling in heavy metal?" I have to give Sebastian credit for that quote. Bon Jovi started an avalanche of what became happy metal. Smiling, happy metal. All of a sudden there was this rash of, "Hey, we're not angry anymore! We're handsome and we get laid!" So I partially blame Bon Jovi for almost killing metal. You also have to blame the record companies, because they just watered the music down. Their attitude is, "If one band is good, a hundred are better," which is fucking moronic. But that's how they work.

Does music suck today compared to the '80s, or is it just different?

Music has lost a lot. Occasionally, you'll see a glimmer of hope in a Buckcherry or something like that. But the video game "Guitar Hero" is fucking unbelievable! The music that they're picking for these games, which are so huge, are always classic, vintage, great rock songs. They're not only picking them, but they're breaking them down and making the kids understand why the songs are great. You don't see Britney Spears or 'N Sync on these games. I walked into my house a year ago and my daughter, with four of her 10-year-old friends, were playing "Mississippi Queen"! I ran to the phone and called Leslie West and told him, "Leslie, I'm looking at four 10-year-olds working on 'Mississippi Queen.' It makes me so happy to see it." I then said to my daughter, "Hey. Cheyenne, do you know who I'm talking to? The guy who actually sings that song." Their faces just dropped. They said, "Are you kidding? Can I say hello to him?" Now my daughter appreciates music and it's not that she's a musical kid. I don't shove my music down her throat. This is all from the exposure kids get from video games. It's games the kids pick and choose for themselves. It's not being forced down their throat. Kids don't need radio anymore to tell them what they should be listening to. They just have to go plug a fucking iPod in and listen to what they want.

That's a great segue to my next question. You're on Sirius Satellite Radio every Friday night doing your Fangoria radio show with Debbie Rochon. However, Sirius stock has been sinking faster than the Titanic. In your opinion, can Sirius survive and be profitable?

I'm going to get fired right now. I'm going to tell you something that is going to get me fired today and end my satellite career. It was doomed before it started.

Why?

I have a friend named Don Specter. He's the third largest patent holder in the world. When he talks, I listen. He invented the hyperbaric chamber. The guy is a genius. He was a brain surgeon at 14 and they based the IQ system on his IQ. He got a 200 and everybody else was rated from there.

Anyway, he said to me two years ago, "Satellite was doomed before it started." I said, "What do you mean?" He said, "Dee, nobody wants multi-pieces of hardware. They want everything all together. When you have iPhones with the Internet, GPS and camera's attached with Wi-Fi, people will listen to Internet radio and you'll be able to dock the phone from your car or home or office computer. It's all contained on one piece of equipment. Nobody wants to carry more than that around. Now, Wi-Fi is all over cities like Baltimore. Sprint just started a new technology that gives you a better signal. You can drive around and get a better Internet connection than you do from a cable connection in your house. For a $45 a month fee, your phone will be on the Internet all the time.

Sirius isn't getting into cars fast enough and they're not getting them to people for free. People used to get free phones with the service. Everything is going to the Internet. Sirius is going to have to go to the Internet as well. It's going to have to change from satellite over to a server.

It's common knowledge that you and the king of satellite radio, Howard Stern, were very close friends at one time. However, I couldn't help but notice the fact that you didn't attend Howard's recent celebrity-packed wedding to Beth Ostrosky. Is there a problem between the two of you?

My wife and I weren't invited. My relationship with Howard hasn't been the same in over a decade. When Howard got divorced, he became a single, partying guy. He became a strip club guy. That left a guy like me in the dust. I just said, "OK, have fun." But we no longer had that connection. It's still not the same. He's not a dad. He's very much a celebrity. He's more of a Hollywood guy now. He claims he screwed up our relationship by not talking to me because I started doing radio when he was the one who suggested I go on radio! I actually asked his permission and offered a piece of my show for supporting me. But he said, "No, it's cool." But then he stopped talking to me. He just stopped returning my phone calls. Yet, he was the one who pushed me into radio to begin with! So, I just couldn't believe he stopped talking to me over it.

Has Howard ever talked about it privately or publicly?

Howard admitted on the air he fucked up the relationship and that it's just too weird now to invite me to his wedding. But when I heard the guest list I thought, "Wow, we're not the same dudes." It was all celebrities. There were no normal people there.

Any chance of the two of you becoming friends again in the future or is it just too weird now for all involved?

He recently had me on the show and I knew we would be friends again if after my segment was over he asked me to stay and hang out with him and do the news. But this time he just shook my hand and said, "Thanks for stopping by." I knew it would never be the same after that.

Finally, what can you tell me about "A Twisted Christmas On Broadway"?

First, let me just say, you sons of bitches better show some support for Twisted Sister! We travel around the world and play sold out arenas. It's amazing how huge we are! But in our own backyard, everybody loves us, but the attitude is, "Oh, they live down the block." People just assume we're always going to be there. Well, we won't always be there and we're not going to keep playing shows. So, now we have "a Twisted Christmas On Broadway." We want to raise the bar, theatrically speaking, and take it to another level. We want to embrace the holiday spirit and the fun of doing a Christmas show. We're also writing a new album that will include the Christmas music and the best of Twisted and some rarities. Plus, we're writing a comedy show which will be a fictitious story coming out in 2009. We won't have to be the cast, meaning other people can perform the show during the holiday season. It will be a great alternative holiday entertainment.

Tickets for "Twisted Sister Presents: A Twisted Christmas On Broadway" are on sale now to the general public. For the ultimate Twisted fan, a VIP package is available inclusive of a General Admission ticket, a personally autographed merchandise item, and a meet and greet and photo with Twisted Sister.

Tickets are available through the Nokia Theatre Times Square box office located at 1515 Broadway at W. 44th St. and/or Ticketmaster.com.

SHATTERING THE RULES OF RELATIONSHIPS

(Syndicated News) According to a study conducted at the College of New Jersey, 78 percent of college students claimed they've "hooked-up" with other students. However, it's not just 20-somethings engaging in casual sex. More people in growing numbers today, married and single, are going online in search of a "friend with benefits" or the traditional one-night-stand.

"I don't have the time or the desire for a relationship," explains "Shirley," a 37-year-old divorced mother of three who shares custody with her ex-husband. "The easiest way to explain it is to say I occasionally want a man in my bed ... just not in my life," she adds.

She's not alone. More people today, particularly those who have had a difficult break-up or a past abusive relationship like Shirley, still want sexual satisfaction. What they don't want are the "headaches" as she calls it, that a traditional relationship brings.

"I'm not searching for happily ever after," Shirley says. "Maybe that will change someday, but for now I'm very content enjoying safe sex with a man who only wants sexual release with someone who can make him smile from time to time. Some people might find that horrible, but for us, it works."

So how has the Internet helped people like Shirley looking for carnal release without the pressures of romance?

The answer is alternative dating and social networking sites. Rather than going someplace that claims to connect people with their soul mate or their perfect match, these sites allow people to meet for "one night," or to find a "sex friend," like Shirley, if that's what they wish. For example, adultspace.com costs nothing to join and people can search based on the criteria they're looking for like sexual orientation (bi, gay, or straight) or marital status. They can post profiles and pictures of themselves and chat online. The one thing that is consistent on the site is that the posters aren't looking for lifelong commitments, just a bit of fun.

Places like adultspace.com are also expanding the practices of swingers too—people who swap spouses—or even those seeking a ménage a trois. Simply put, the concept of "Key Parties"—the practice of putting keys into a hat and going home with that partner that's draw—are evolving thanks to the web.

"I have a very sexually liberated wife," says "Vern," a computer technician married to the same woman for over 17 years. "I'd definitely call her adventurous and I'm living the ultimate male fantasy," he laughs before turning serious. "But being in a small town—a place where you'll find more sexual repression than expression—was always difficult." Today that's changed according to Vern, due in part to sites like adultspace.com.

"The web is wonderful," he says. "We can find people in another county or even another state who share our views and philosophies on love and sex. That's important to both of us because we're far less likely to walk into a PTA meeting and end up face-to-face with a former lover."

Although experts might disagree when it comes to casual sex they all agree on one thing—taking safety precautions that include things like practicing safe sex. So married or single, gay or straight, the web will continue to impact all areas of human life ... including sex.

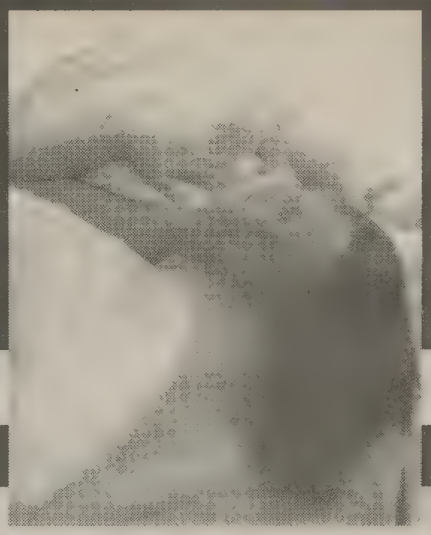
BETWEEN THE SHEETS

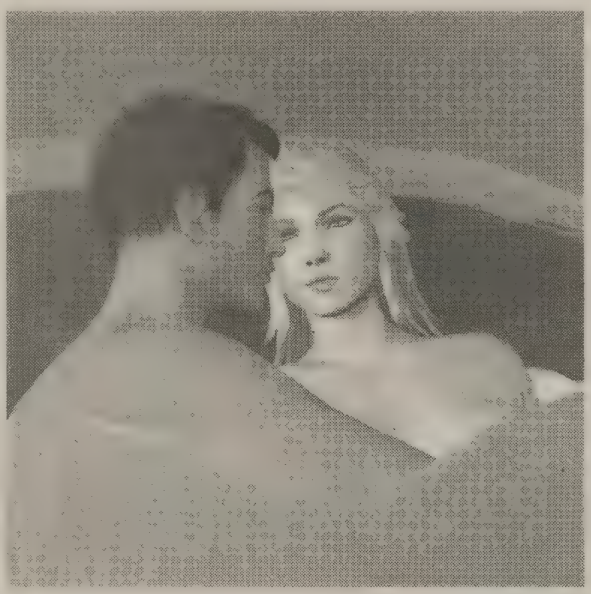
WHERE ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN!

By ANGELA POMPELLI-BUTLER



I came across an article in Parade magazine last week called "The Truth About American Marriage," which surveyed married people and their "unhealthy" sex lives. Since I just celebrated my first wedding anniversary and my sex life is better than ever, I had to let others know that married sex can, and should, be the best sex you've ever had in your life!

Here are the stats, my comments and some words of wisdom so you don't fall victim to a sex-less marriage:



31 percent of married couples have sex less than once a month.

Are you kidding me? I find this hard to believe and totally unacceptable, which leaves me to believe you probably shouldn't have married this lame-o piece of ass to begin with. Make it a point to double that monthly number, triple it and so on and so forth until your doing it a couple times a week rather than once a month.

48 percent of men don't have sex more often because their spouse isn't interested.

That's just about one out of every two men! That doesn't make any sense to me. You vowed to spend the rest of your life with this person, which meant having sex with the same person until the end of time, so you better make the best of it. Come on ladies ... put on some lingerie, get yourself horned up and make it happen!

33 percent of women don't have sex more often because they're tired.

You'll sleep when you're dead! This is not a valid excuse! If you're too tired at the end of the day, make more time for love making during the day. Try doing it in the morning, right after work or before dinner.

25 percent describe marital sex as either tolerable or terrible.

Wow! If that is the case, you probably both suck in bed. Even if the sex you're having isn't the greatest, it should never be characterized as tolerable or terrible! Take a class or read a book. I'm out of suggestions for this one.

To be honest ... if your sex life happened to go down the shitter after marriage, it's probably safe to say it was on its way down well before you said "I do." It's important that sex is handled just like any other element of a marriage: With attention, communication and understanding. I firmly believe that "sex is the glue that holds a marriage together"! While some may say that's shallow or superficial ... I say it's true.

Truly yours,

Angela
